

Earthquake Victims May Total 6,000

By PHIL DOPOULOS
SKOPJE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Dazed survivors joined thousands of rescue workers today in sifting rubble for victims of Friday's earthquake, which reduced Yugoslavia's fourth largest city to ruins.

Army earthmoving equipment uncovered more than 500 bodies from debris where Moslem mosques and minarets and modern skyscrapers once stood.

City officials fear the death toll may run into the thousands. One official said it may reach 6,000.

It was not known immediately whether the victims included Americans, although some were known to have been in the city when the earthquake struck at dawn.

The two biggest hotels, the Macedonia and the Skopje, were destroyed. Officials said 260 tourists died in the Hotel Macedonia alone.

This is the height of the tourist season in Eastern Europe and many foreigners were in Skopje.

The quake—the worst natural disaster in modern Yugoslav history—destroyed about 85 percent of the buildings in Skopje, northern Macedonian capital, and left at least half of the population of 270,000 homeless.

It was hard to estimate the total number of injured. Officials said more than 2,000 persons were treated at emergency stations.

Authorities rushed in an emergency force of 10,000, mostly soldiers, fearing an outbreak of fires from broken gas mains.

Residents were warned against drinking water that may have been polluted. In one section, residents mobbed an army truck bringing in water.

The army set up canteens to feed the survivors.

Children were lodged in resort hotels taken over by the government.

President Tito, who decreed Friday and today as days of national mourning, was expected to arrive today. Premier Petar Szombor arrived five hours after the earthquake and promised all possible aid to the survivors.

Survivors, many dazed and others weeping, spent the night in army tents or huddled under blankets.

Some gathered around bonfires, afraid to seek shelter in the few remaining buildings. By dawn, more than 90 new tremors were recorded in the area.

An eerie silence hung over the city, broken only by cries and moans. Men, women and children wandered aimlessly, clutching what few possessions they had saved.

Many wore pajamas. They fled from their beds in panic when the earthquake struck.

A mother sat beside a pile of rubble clutching the crushed bodies of her two children.

America's 600,000 Dog Bites Each Year Also Nips Your Pocketbook—Some $5 Million

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

When a dog bites you, he also takes a nip out of your pocketbook. America's 600,000 dog-bite cases a year cost about $5 million in medical expenses.

Incidentally, 76 per cent of the victims are under the age of 20. One study showed nearly two thirds admitted the dog's attack was not entirely unprovoked.

Prosperity note: There are more $20 bills in circulation today than there were $10 bills two decades ago.

Do you gamble? If you don't, you're in a minority. It is estimated that up to 120 million Americans indulge with a fair degree of regularity in some form of betting — on everything from baseball to bingo.

Schools Owe a Record Amount

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The state Education Department said Thursday that Arkansas school districts owed a record high of $125,105,685 at the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

But, the legal limit of borrowing by the districts still is $94,713,332 above the amount owed, the department said.

Act 38 of 1961 says a school district can borrow up to 15 per cent of its latest assessed valuation. The department said the 418 districts in the state had a total assessed valuation of $1,465,460,113.

The state Board of Education in some cases allows districts to borrow up to 18 per cent.

Union Says Kennedy Plan Not Answer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Roy E. Davidson, head of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, told the Senate Commerce Committee today that President Kennedy's plan to settle the railroad dispute is wholly unacceptable.

He said he has no doubt he would be kicked out of his job as grand chief engineer if he went along with the plan to turn the issues over to the Interstate Commerce Commission for judgment for the next two years.

Davidson led off for the brotherhoods in presenting their first reaction to Congress on the President's proposal.

He told a reporter he is certain each of the other four unions of on-train workers involved in the dispute oppose the plan for dealing with proposals by the carriers to put in new manpower-cutting work rules.

Shortly before Davidson's appearance on the Senate side of the Capitol, a House hearing had heard from one head of the ICC that the agency did not seek the job but would make every effort to "meet the heavy responsibility."

Slav City Has Had Four Names

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Yugoslav city of Skopje, struck by an earthquake today, has had four names in its long history.

As the ancient and medieval capital of the Serbian kingdom, the city was known as Scupi.

Under the rule of the Turks, from the 14th century to the early 20th century, the city carried the Turkish name of Uskub.

After the breakup of the Turkish empire, the city became a part of Serbia and then of the new nation Yugoslavia.

It was given the Serbo-Croatian name of Skopje.

In 1945, when Tito took control of Yugoslavia, he redrew the country's provincial lines, putting Skopje in the province of Macedonia. The city, named capital of the province, took a name with a Macedonian spelling—Skopje.

Beachmaster Has Heart Trouble

WORCESTER, England (AP)—Adm. Sir William Tennant, the beachmaster who guided thousands of British troops to safety at the epic evacuation of Dunkerque, was in charge of embarking troops in the armada of small craft and naval vessels which saved much of the British army in Europe in May, 1940.

Sir William entered the Worcester Naval Infirmary a few days ago with heart strain.

Demo Leaders Hope to Win GOP Backing

By ERNEST B. VACCARO
WASHINGTON (AP) — Democratic leaders are counting on strong Republican backing to help win Senate approval of the nuclear test ban treaty. But they don't intend to try to rush it through.

In his address Friday night urging public support for the agreement, President Kennedy spoke indirectly to the Senate, saying: "I am hopeful that this nation will promptly approve the limited test ban treaty."

The Senate Democratic leader, Mike Mansfield of Montana, promised the Senate would move "as expeditiously as possible."

But in an interview with The Associated Press he added: "This is a very important breakthrough in our efforts to lessen cold war tensions, and we are not going to try to rush it through. The Senate will be given time to consider the whole agreement, including the fine print, if any, because the public has the greatest stake in this. This will be an open agreement, openly arrived at."

Kennedy, too, noted there will be debate "in the country and in the Senate. The Constitution wisely requires the advice and consent of the Senate to all treaties . . . all this is as it should be."

The Moscow agreement banning all nuclear tests except underground must be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate. If all 100 Senators voted it would need 67 ayes—the number of Democrats in the Senate.

But all Democrats may not vote for the pact, and Mansfield said Republicans will be the key to ratification, particularly the Senate GOP leader, Everett M. Dirksen, who has not committed himself.

Said Mansfield: "It is my avowed hope Sen. Dirksen and I will be working shoulder-to-shoulder to this one when the chips are down."

"And I have every confidence in the fairness of the Republicans. I am certain that with them, it will not be politics, but what will be good for their country."

Dirksen stressed the need for care: "Every word and every line and every phase of the treaty must be carefully examined for its present and future effect."

The committee most directly concerned, Senate Foreign Relations, is scheduled to hear testimony Monday from Undersecretary of State W. Averell Harriman, who initiated the agreement for the United States.

The Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee and Senate Armed Services Committee also will sit in at the closed session.

Mansfield said he counts on Harriman to remove any doubts that U.S. interests are safeguarded in the treaty.

"His experience with the Soviet Union goes back two decades," he said. "He has never yet been taken in by the Russians and is not being taken in by them now."

Sen. John O. Pastore, D-R.I., chairman of the Atomic Energy Committee, said Kennedy's speech was a good one which "I think will draw public support—I expect there will be a lot of letters to Senators asking them to support the treaty."

WASHINGTON (A) — The Civil Aeronautics Board today canceled the authority of Northeast Airlines to operate on the highly prized New York-Florida route.

The decision, which the board described as tentative, leaves National Airlines and Eastern Airlines to serve the New York-Florida market.

The board also announced that Northeast would be restored to a subsidy status as soon as its operations south of New York are ended. The line also operates in New England.

When You Look for Material About Columbus, the Name Wilson Keeps Cropping Up

By MARY ANITA LASETER
In looking for material about Columbus (the town, not the man), the name, Wilson, kept coming to the forefront. We immediately thought of the outstanding medical missionary, Dr. Mantor Wilson, recently deceased, but it was his father about whom much interesting information was found.

James Stephenson Wilson, Sr. had 25c in his pocket when he rode a pony from Mississippi to Arkansas in 1856 and settled in Columbus, Hempstead County. He established a general mercantile store there and operated it over 60 years. When panic swept throughout the land during the crash of '29, it was Mr. Wilson who assumed the assets of the Bank of Columbus and paid off its depositors in full.

He borrowed money personally — something he never did on his own account — to discharge this service to the community where he had spent most of his long and robust life. Many will remember seeing the fine old gentleman and goatie riding a horse on his daily tour of farmlands when he was past 90. A picture of him appeared in the "Hope Star" centennial edition of 1936. He was 93 then.

Born October 3, 1843, at the place where Okolona, Miss., now is, near Tupelo, Mr. Wilson was only 13 when he rode to Columbus. Five years later, the War Between the States began, and he was 18, so he joined the Confederate forces in the ranks of the Hempstead Rifles, Co. 2, commanded by Capt. Jeff.

He served all four years of the war, then went to school in Alabama before returning to farming in Columbus. After getting interested in the cotton business in Mobile, Ala., he entered the cotton trade there. With money he saved in this enterprise, he and a brother, Thomas Edward, opened the Wilson store at Columbus.

One of the fondest memories of this Hempstead County pioneer, according to the "36 "Star," was the trip he and his wife made to the Orient to visit their missionary son and his family. They went to Korea by way of Canada, took a ship to Japan, and there, because of their difficulty with the language, had to call on another son, Charles of the Hempstead County Memorial Hospital today. Charles rescued his parents' baggage from the Japanese, and the family party happily continued to Korea.

After four months Mr. and Mrs. Wilson returned home, and they always liked to recall their trip. A son, Joe, and a daughter, Mamie (Mrs. R. E. Jackson), both of Columbus, remember their father's statement about it: "I am always glad we took that trip. Japan and the Orient are so much more worthwhile seeing than Europe — for in Europe an American would see only that with which he is already familiar. But the Orient is different — an entirely new world for the Westerner."

Draftees of Today Are Smarter Boys

By ELTON C. FAY
WASHINGTON (AP)—Draftees today are brighter boys than those inducted during World War II and Korea, the Pentagon's personnel experts believe.

Mental standards for inductees were raised last May 1. But the trend toward more selectivity in Selective Service had been under way for several years. Soldiers have to be mentally sharper because the equipment they handle now is more complex.

Since Korea, only the Army has used the draft. Asked how present draftees stack up against those of the past two wars, the Army said:

"On the average, the quality of draftees today is better than World War II and Korea because the mental standards for induction are higher. Therefore, fewer lower mental category personnel can qualify for service. On the other hand, fewer high mental category personnel are being inducted today because of a smaller draft than in World War II and Korea."

Physical standards have not changed.

The rejection rate on the basis of mental tests (which really mean how much native intelligence and ability to learn a man has) is higher now, partly because the military can be more selective in peace time than in war. Moreover, deferments for those who qualify can be and are higher in peacetime.

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, estimates, for example, that about 300,000 are deferred now so they can go to college. But, in testimony before the House Armed Services Committee recently, Hershey hastened to say that "I don't want to claim that we are keeping these boys in college, because we couldn't induct them in any great numbers if they didn't go to college."

Hershey's view seems substantiated by draft quota figures. Only 4,000 draftees were asked by the Army for each of the months of January and February, while the high point so far this year is the 12,000 monthly quota set for August and September. Army strength now totals about 970,000.

The draft law was extended for another four years by the present Congress. How long will a draft system be needed?

"It is our judgment," say the military manpower experts, "that the Selective Service System and the authority to induct will be required so long as the international situation remains substantially unchanged."

There was a 15-month period in 1947-48 when the draft law lapsed, after the end of World War II and before the Communist threat began booming large. But since September 1950, a total of 2,845,450 will have been drafted when the September quota is filled.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Yugoslav city of Skopje, struck by an earthquake today, has had four names in its long history.

As the ancient and medieval capital of the Serbian kingdom, the city was known as Scupi.

Under the rule of the Turks, from the 14th century to the early 20th century, the city carried the Turkish name of Uskub.

After the breakup of the Turkish empire, the city became a part of Serbia and then of the new nation Yugoslavia.

It was given the Serbo-Croatian name of Skopje.

In 1945, when Tito took control of Yugoslavia, he redrew the country's provincial lines, putting Skopje in the province of Macedonia. The city, named capital of the province, took a name with a Macedonian spelling—Skopje.

Communication Station Now 2,000 Miles Up

By HOWARD BENESCH
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) —The Syncom 2 space communications station, riding high more than 2,000 miles above the earth, drifted slowly today toward its goal as the world's first satellite to operate over one area of the globe.

At its present rate of speed, about 6,800 miles an hour, Syncom 2 will reach a point over the equator above northern Brazil next Saturday. Scientists plan to stop it there by sending radio signals to fire nitrogen jets which will adjust the satellite speed and angle.

If all goes well, the satellite's speed will increase to about 6,800 miles an hour and thus will be synchronous with the speed of the earth rotating below.

The earth at the equator travels 1,040 miles an hour, but Syncom 2 would be like a runner on an outside track who has to move faster to keep pace.

The above-Brazil point was selected as the best for communications experiments planned between the Syncom ground stations at Lakehurst, N.J., and on the ship Kingsport, anchored at Lagos, Nigeria, on the coast of West Africa.

Early communications tests were rated highly successful by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The Kingsport beamed the music of "The Star Spangled Banner," voice tapes and teletype messages to the drum-shaped package. The satellite sent them back "loud and clear."

Officials cautioned that true tests lie ahead when Syncom 2 will be in position for two-way transmission between Africa and the United States via the two stations. They predicted the satellite will be within radio range of both by Monday.

Project Director Alton Jones said major goals are to put the satellite in a synchronous orbit, stabilize it and then establish contact for a long period between Lakehurst and the Kingsport.

Because a satellite at Syncom 2's altitude would be within radio range of more than one-third of the earth's surface, only three such craft would be needed for continuous worldwide communications coverage. They would seemingly stand still in space at evenly spaced points about 22,300 miles above the equator.

The lower-altitude Telstar and Relay-type communications systems would require 40 or 50 satellites and far more extensive ground facilities.

Because of its small size, Syncom 2 will be restricted to radio, telephone, teletype and photo facsimile tests.

The space agency plans a larger Syncom, the first of which could be in the sky in 1965, to beam television and other communications.

A Delta rocket started Syncom 2 on its complex journey Friday.

Distance Call Pan Defended

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — R. H. Wilbourn Jr., president of Allied Telephone Co., told the Public Service Commission today that phone subscribers in Fordyce, Bearden and Sparkman had quickly accepted a long-distance dialing system involving 13 digits.

Wilbourn said he is certain Sheridan subscribers would accept an experimental dialing system without an operator, despite the objections of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. that they would not.

He testified in a hearing in which Allied is asking permission to try the experiment and Bell is opposing it.

Wilbourn said he had worked for Bell for 10 years before starting his own company. He said after he devised his Allied experiment for Sheridan, he talked with Bell officials and didn't get their rejection of the idea for 11 months.

Differ Over U.S. Laws to Desegregate

WASHINGTON (AP)—Mayor Ivan Allen Jr. of Atlanta, Ga., would help advance voluntary desegregation of places of public accommodation. Gov. Donal Russell of South Carolina said it would breed resistance.

Their conflicting testimony on a bill to ban racial discrimination in stores, hotels, restaurants and other privately owned businesses serving the public was presented to the Senate Commerce Committee.

Allen, the first witness, said if Congress should not pass the bill it "would amount to an endorsement of private business setting up an entirely new status of discrimination throughout the nation."

"Cities like Atlanta might slip backwards," he said, adding that "hotels and restaurants that have already taken this issue upon themselves and opened their doors might find it convenient to go back to the old status."

Gov. Russell said racial discrimination is not a problem for either state or federal government, that it can best be met voluntarily on the local level.

"Legal coercion will actually retard, not accelerate advances in creating that atmosphere of mutual respect and understanding so urgently needed today by both races," he said.

The governor maintained that "the only kind of change which can promise real advance will be voluntary. Coercive legislation will breed resistance and perhaps violence and destroy that area of understanding and cooperation upon which alone we can base peaceful change."

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS
By ROBERT J. SLOAN

The roaring fire in the pot-belly stove felt good on this nippy November afternoon. The big thermometer hanging outside a window at City Hall had registered not less than 25 nor more than 42 degrees in the past week.

Poor men slouched around a card table; Nick Hefner, the Chief of Police; Henry W. Herseman M.D., the county coroner, and two members of the Williamstown Volunteer Fire Department.

The men would have preferred poker for pennies, but pinocchio for fun was as far as they dared go without having the busybody Wom, en Victor's League on their necks. Nick Hefner had just laid his cards face down to light his pipe when Herb Masters unceremoniously barged into the room shouting, "Chief! Doc! I just found old man Cromwell—dead as a door-nail!"

Gone was all interest in pinocchio.

Nick jumped to his feet. "Where did you find him? Everybody thought he had skipped off to the city on one of his spur-of-the-moment surlines."

"I found him behind the bushes about 30 feet from the road near the old bridge. My dog barked so much at something off the road I just had to go and look."

"Did you touch him or anything near him?"

"No siree, Chief! I just high-tailed it to City Hall to find you."

Chief Hefner and the coroner looked at the body lying face down without touching it. Hefner was interested in the new-fangled, self-wind wrist watch that old Cromwell had been so proudly displaying around town. The large sweep-second hand was moving.

The Chief reached into the inside pocket of the dead man's coat and removed a wallet. It contained a few identification cards, but not the five new, crisp $20 bills which Cromwell always carried with him. It was his eccentricity of showing off.

The Chief straightened up. "What do you think, Doc?"

"I can't say much about the autopsy, but I'll venture that he died instantly from a heart attack. I don't see any signs of violence, although it appears, by the leaves sticking to the clothing on his back that someone has turned him over then back again."

Chief Hefner placed his hand on Herb Masters' shoulder. "Where did you hide the hundred dollars you took from old Cromwell's wallet?"

Herb, with a worried, surprised look on his face whirled around and stammered, "What are you talking about, Chief?"

"You know what I'm talking about. I want to know where you hid the five new $20 bills you took from old Cromwell's wallet."

"Chief! You can't possibly think I had anything to do with Crom-

Corn Crop Is Deteriorating

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The Agriculture Department said today that the corn crop is deteriorating in northwest Arkansas but that crops in other parts of the state are in good condition.

Cotton prospects are very favorable and growth was stimulated by recent rain. A good rice crop is expected and recent rain helped soybeans but additional moisture is needed in some areas.

The corn crop as a whole is good, but the drought in the northwest section of the state has hurt prospects there. Picking of peaches is well along and harvest of the main Elberta crop is under way in south Arkansas. The crop is expected to be good.

Baling of a short hay crop continues. Late hay prospects have improved since rains in much of east and south Arkansas.

Partly cloudy and a little warmer Saturday with scattered afternoon thunderstorms and highs of 85-90. Little change Sunday.

Northwest and Southwest Arkansas: Cloudy to partly cloudy and mild this afternoon and tonight with scattered showers and thunderstorms. Partly cloudy and a little warmer Saturday with scattered thunderstorms. High this afternoon 80-90. Low tonight 64-74. High Saturday 88-95. Little change Sunday.

MOP Rates to Be Increased

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP)—The Missouri Public Service Commission granted the Missouri Pacific Railroad authority Thursday to increase passenger fares on its St. Louis to Arkansas line by 10 per cent.

The increase, to be effective Aug. 2, backs up a 10 per cent increase granted the line last April 3 on its St. Louis-Kansas City run. Similar increases were given the Wabash and Frisco lines at that time.

The commission said it had found the discontinuance of Train No. 6 from the Arkansas line to St. Louis would save the railroad less than $105,000.

The commission had estimated earlier that $400,000 would be saved.

Mental Test for Slaver of Negro

There is no love in our family. If someone mentions the word my father and mother act as if they considered it dirty. They sleep in separate rooms, go their separate ways.

To me, love is a wonderful thing. The love between this man and myself is deep and lasting. We share our troubles and trust and understand one another fully. We date every other Sunday. My parents think that is too often. I just can't understand them. Should I assert myself or remain the obedient "little girl." —Confused

Dear Confused: If you're announcing your engagement next month you are asserting yourself and are no longer the "obedient little girl." I think you're on the right track.

Although 18 is still rather young for marriage, you seem to have carefully considered your situation and thoughtfully analyzed your parents' opposition. The very fact that you are torn between a reluctance to disobey your mother and father and the perfectly natural desire to marry the man you love, indicates a high level of maturity.

Very few major decisions of life are cut and dried. The best one can do is to weigh all sides and then try to make the most intelligent choice. This I believe you are doing.

Since you don't mention how long you have known this man, I can't comment on the depth of your love. I hope it is as deep as you claim, and as lasting. Dating every other Sunday strikes me as being ultraconservative, and I can't imagine why your parents should object. I would be inclined to think that it isn't often enough for two people to see each other when they are trying to make up their minds whether to spend the rest of their lives together.

Certainly your sister's elopement eight years ago is not a valid reason for the family's opposition to your romance, especially since her marriage turned out well. You are not acting rashly, and if your engagement lasts a reasonable length of time, no one could accuse you of undue haste.

Your diagnosis of your parents' sour attitude is probably correct. The bitterness that a forced but loveless relationship generates is sad and pitiable. Having lost their love for each other, they are determined to stand in the way of anyone else finding love. This is a childish reaction. Their disappointment and disillusionment shouldn't be allowed to inhibit their children's lives.

Dear Helen: I notice that teen girls frequently disagree with you—and their parents—about the right age for dating. I started going out with boys at 16 and thought my parents old-fashioned because they refused to let me date sooner, now I realize how mistaken I was. About make-up too. I used it with a heavy hand. It made me look cheap and as a consequence, attracted the wrong kind of boys. —Word of Warning.

Dear Word of Warning: Your words should carry more weight than mine with teen girls because you speak from sad experience. Thank you for writing.

LOVELESS PARENTS LOVING DAUGHTER

By HELEN WORDEN ERSKINE

Dear Helen: My parents and I are as far apart as the poles. I am an 18-year-old girl who was graduated from high last spring and have a fine paying job. With this record I feel mature enough to make my own decisions. They don't agree.

Already dissension is arising over my love for the man to whom I shall announce my engagement next month. He is 22 and wonderful in every respect. My parents don't deny this but the trouble is that they have never really forgiven my sister for eloping eight years ago, even though her marriage proved to be a happy one.

Keeps Fingers Crossed Over Test Treaty

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nuclear test ban agreement looks like a leap forward in the history of mankind. And maybe it is. But it wasn't unselfish and there are reasons for keeping your fingers crossed.

This was the first accord between the West and Russia in this field after almost continuous talking since World War II. It could be the beginning of much better relations and even more far-reaching understandings.

But the motives were not all strictly humanitarian when the Americans, British and Russians Thursday in Moscow agreed to stop testing in the atmosphere, outer space and under the sea.

This country and Russia have about all the nuclear weapons they seem to think they need. It will take anyone else years to catch up. Testing is highly expensive. So by not testing they save money.

Certainly in time more nations will develop nuclear weapons of their own. The more the nations that have them, the greater the danger of triggering a world war.

The Americans, British and Russians hope by their agreement to discourage other would-be nuclear powers from going on to create their own nuclear weapons and test them.

For this reason Thursday's signers suggested other nations join their agreement. If there's no more testing by anyone, the world is spared radioactive fallout. That would be an improvement but it's far from a sure bet.

The French are known to be developing nuclear weapons and the Red Chinese are suspected of doing so. The French have already done some testing, will probably do more. The Chinese are expected to start theirs in a year or two.

Neither is bound by the Moscow agreement. And Thursday in Paris the French foreign minister, Maurice Couve de Murville, said that so long as the great nuclear powers do not disarm, then any ban on nuclear testing that they agree on is a device to try to freeze their monopoly.

The Red Chinese denounced the agreement before it was reached. Since they are breaking away from Russia, whom they distrust, they will undoubtedly try to build their own nuclear arsenal so as to be a match for Russia and the West.

Whether Russia abandons the agreement if the French test, or the United States does likewise if the Chinese test, remains to be seen. Their agreement said any signer can ignore it if it thinks its interests are being jeopardized.

With the agreement only one day old, no one, including the signers, can say confidently how long it will last.

Nevertheless, because this country and Russia are years ahead of anyone else, they may not feel it necessary for some time to abandon the no-test agreement no matter what France and China do.

For Soviet Premier Khrushchev the agreement served several purposes besides those mentioned. For one thing, he can make propaganda out of it by waving be that seeing his first wife again has caused a flare-up of his old feeling for her—in which case I would appeal to his parents for their cooperation in preventing future reunions.

Woman Prisoner Escapes Briefly
ALDERSON, W. Va. (AP)—Mrs. Patricia Cash, 24, serving a four-year term for kidnapping in Arkanzas, was returned to the federal reformatory for women early today after a brief escape.

Mrs. Cash was sentenced in Little Rock on May 29, 1962, for kidnapping Gary Simpson, 4, from a motel at Lonoke, Ark., the previous Feb. 28.

The boy's mother said Mrs. Cash had stayed at the motel and had taken a liking to the boy. The Simpsons operated the motel.

Mrs. Cash was arrested at a motel in Texarkana, Tex.

She left the minimum security reformatory some time Thursday night. Mrs. Cash was taken into custody early today in Alderson.

Testing takes a lot of money, time, energy and manpower. An end to testing enables Khrushchev to use some of these resources in his trouble with the Red Chinese who now look like his closest, and perhaps his worst, enemy.

What was left out of the Moscow agreement is a good reminder to romantics that this accord does not quite mean a completely new era in East-West relations. The three signers left themselves some out.

They did not agree to stop testing underground. There all three can test new ideas for improving weapons or fashioning entirely new ones.

The agreement Thursday to ban tests in the atmosphere, outer space and under the sea could have been reached some time ago since cheating in those regions can be detected without having inspectors in the cheating country.

Not so with underground tests. The United States has insisted it would not agree to ban tests underground unless Russia agreed to permit inspectors inside the Soviet Union while other inspectors checked inside the United States.

Russia called such inspection spying and refused to agree. In time, maybe agreement can be reached on this, too. Perhaps Thursday's agreement was just the first of many. Don't bet on it until it happens.

Treaty to Be Closely Examined

WASHINGTON (AP)—Chairman John Stennis, D-Miss., announced today that a Senate defense watchdog group will examine in detail the proposed new agreement with Britain and Soviet Russia for a ban on most nuclear weapons testing.

His announcement could mean some delay in apparent administration efforts for quick Senate ratification of the agreement initiated in Moscow Thursday.

Stennis said his 7-member Armed Services subcommittee wants to know "whether this agreement fully protects our national security and whether any risks which may be involved in it are truly acceptable."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., a member of the investigating panel, previously announced his opposition to the test ban after hearing an explanation by Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Disarmament May Come, Nikita Says

MOSCOW (AP)—Premier Khrushchev declared today that the agreement on the new nuclear test ban treaty created favorable opportunities to proceed to total disarmament.

He made the statement in answer to questions from correspondents of Izvestia and Pravda submitted to him in writing. They will be published in the two papers tonight and Saturday morning.

The answers were read to correspondents at a press conference in the Foreign Office shortly after Undersecretary of State W. Averell Harriman made a declaration in the same spirit at a news conference in the U.S. Embassy.

10 Counties in Drought Area

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Ten Arkansas counties were recommended for designation as drought disaster areas Thursday.

Some had applied to the state Disaster Committee for eligibility to purchase federal grain at support prices and others to graze cattle and cut hay on lands retired under conservation programs.

The counties were Benton, Boone, Johnson, Madison, Searcy, Washington, Carroll, Newton, Conway and Perry.

The recommendation of the Disaster Committee will go to the Agriculture Department.

Fines Carry $1 Retirement Fee

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—The attorney general's office held today that Act 257 of 1963 applies to arrests made by sheriffs and State Police as well as by city police.

The act requires assessment of an additional $1 fine on each conviction for a moving traffic violation, with the extra revenue pledged to police pension funds.

The extra fine is collectable only in municipal courts in cities which have a retirement system for their police.

The attorney general's opinion went to North Little Rock Police Chief Ray Vick, who is president of the Arkansas Municipal Police Association.

Weed-Killer Use Is Being Checked

PINE BLUFF, Ark. (AP)—The federal Food and Drug Administration is checking reports that a chemical weed-killer is being used improperly in southeastern Arkansas cotton fields.

The FDA said Thursday the chemical, disodium methylarsenate (DSMA), was supposed to be used during the early growing period rather than as a "lay-by" chemical applied after crop cultivation has ended and bolls have formed.

Use of the chemical after bolls are formed is banned to prevent contamination of cotton seed later processed for use in various food-stuffs.

The FDA said the chemical contained a salt of arsenic which affects the nervous system and might be dangerous to persons with weak hearts.

AP&L to Build Transmission Line

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—Arkansas Power & Light Co., was authorized by the Public Service Commission Thursday to spend $575,000 in construction of a transmission line and transformer station in the Mountain View area of St. Louis County.

The 20.8-mile, 161,000-volt transmission line would cost $425,000 and would tie into the existing AP&L Norfolk-Batesville line near Sage in Izard County. The remainder of the funds would be spent for the transformer station and related equipment.

Recapitalization of the Allied Telephone Co., also was approved by the PSC. Allied proposes to increase its 170,000 number of its shares to be outstanding at any one time.

Pennel Sets Pole Vault Record

By JIM BECKER

Associated Press Sports Writer WARSAW, Poland (AP) - John Pennel upped the world pole vault record for the second time in two weeks today as he leaped 5.14 meters—16 feet 10 1/2 inches.

The stadium announcer at the United States-Poland track meet first announced Pennel's height as 5.11 (16-9), but after official measurements were taken, it was announced as 5.14.

Pennel's great performance climaxed a resounding 68-36 lead for the U.S. men's track and field team over their Polish rivals after the first day's competition in the two-day dual meet behind the Iron Curtain.

The final events will be staged Saturday.

Poland's girls led by 27-23 on the official scoreboard, although press box calculations put it at 27-24.

Jumping in gathering gloom, Pennel snapped his own mark set last July 13 in London of 16-8 1/4.

Jake Ferment called the phone number on Christmas Eve. When he got the woman on the phone, they talked briefly and after he thanked her for the smokes, he asked her identity.

There was a long wistful pause and then she said, "I'm Peter Hackett's widow. He had me send gifts every Christmas to all the men he ever sent up. He had a job to do, understand, and he did it well. But he wasn't so tough that it didn't bother him."

After the initial shock, Jake asked her about the odd three-letter name on the gift cards. She said one word, not really a name, and then politely hung up.

Jake looked at the gift as he put down the phone. Strangely, the holiday-wrapped present still filled him with that warmth. Maybe he hadn't cemented up as much as he thought. He looked, curious, for the word in a dictionary.

Jake smiled. Wasn't that a kick in the head, he thought! The men in tier seven, cell five were puffing on smokes sent by . . . Nemo sis.

Rock to Become a Consultant

LITTLE ROCK (AP) - William P. Rock, former executive secretary of the Arkansas Industrial Development Commission, will be retained by the AIDC as a consultant. Winthrop Rockefeller said Thursday.

Rockefeller, chairman of the AIDC, said Gov. Orval E. Faubus had approved the retention of Rock, who resigned as executive secretary June 30 to enter private business as a consultant.

SHORTY A 2-Minute Short Story

THE GREEK GODDESS By ALEX JANE BENCHLY

Peter Hackett looks like a bull-dog with a cigar stuck in its jaws. This idea was hardened convict Jake Ferment's private and silent opinion in tier seven at Stateville. Few men in tier seven held any love for Hackett. He had gone after crime with moral vengeance.

Anti-crime societies respected the dedicated detective, but law-breakers feared him. After a trial—and his cases stood up in court—they hated him.

They were talking about Hackett in tier seven, cell five and Jake Ferment just listened. Then in quiet, tense tones, he spoke his piece.

"I aim to pay a visit to Hackett's house when I get out."

There was a thoughtful pause, until someone else said, "By that name, Jake, he'll be cold. You got another year in this hole." There was a bitter chuckle. "Leastways, I hope he's dead before that. Besides, I heard he wasn't feelin' so good these days."

Someone else said, "Man, that Hackett is one ugly guy! I'd like to have his neck right here in my mitts. Pink said he was pushin' 60. That right, Jake?"

Jake's green eyes took on a hard ominous lustre. "That's about right. I heard he got something wrong with his ticker. I just hope he don't kick off before I see him again." Jake dry-washed his big hands then pounded fist into palm with hard whacks.

He reached over to his bunk and lifted a pack of cigarettes from the carton. He shoved the red and green holiday wrappings aside and glanced at the Christmas card signed, "Nem" stuck to the paper. It renewed the one warm feeling he had gotten every year for the past five years. Nobody remembered to send him gifts while he sat in stir, except Nem, whoever that was.

Jake had a lot of time to plan and he aimed to take care of Hackett but good when this stretch was up. There would be no slip-up, Jake believed he could do it without the crime being traced to him. There were plenty of others who had reason to take care of Hackett.

Several other men in tier seven received cigarettes from Nem. But they didn't give it much thought, they were just happy to get the smokes. Very little stirred the imagination of these men serving long stretches behind bars. One day was like another and every Yuletide was the same.

Except the last one for Jake Ferment. He was released two days before that Christmas. As he stood in the warden's office, getting the usual good-by spiel, he looked toward the window.

"It's snowing," Jake said when the warden had finished his farewell talk.

The warden glanced out the window. "So it is. And that reminds me. Since you won't be with us this year on Christmas . . ."

"Cigarettes from Nem?" Jake asked, feeling that warm glow.

The warden nodded.

"I'd like to call that guy when I get out. If it is a guy," Jake paused, frowning. "Hey, maybe it's a dame."

"It's a dame," the warden said, scribbling a phone number on a piece of paper. "Call her, Jake. She'll appreciate it."

Jake was curiously puzzled. "You know this dame, warden?"

"Yes. And she'll be glad to have you call right now." He said no more.

Jake left the pen as if he intended to lead an honest life. But he still resolved to take care of Hackett. And he would also thank that dame for the smokes.

Jake Ferment called the phone number on Christmas Eve. When he got the woman on the phone, they talked briefly and after he thanked her for the smokes, he asked her identity.

There was a long wistful pause and then she said, "I'm Peter Hackett's widow. He had me send gifts every Christmas to all the men he ever sent up. He had a job to do, understand, and he did it well. But he wasn't so tough that it didn't bother him."

matter of fact

The first federal income tax was imposed in 1862 to meet Civil War expenditures. Despite inadequate enforcement the tax yielded substantial revenue, but complaints of evasion and general dislike of the principle caused Congress to allow the act to expire in 1872.

a warning

Foolish the moth which seeks in the candle, not life but death! Beneath the light there is the burning flame... sudden death for the moth.

A light is a warning to a sailor, a guide to the airman, a beacon to the lost.

It can either save or destroy. Do we seek light or just the flame? Beneficent goods may be turned into destroying weapons.

Food was meant to give health and strength. It is an instrument of good, but given to the glutton, it brings him ruin. Grapes grow for man's sustenance. But when the wine is loved for itself it degrades the body, befuddles the mind and sickens

the spirit. *God gave us His church, His word to light our way. If we use them for good, no harm will come to us. We won't get hurt
as did the moths.*
